

Population Estimates

Alberta's total population growth continued to improve in the first quarter of 2011, largely due to the increase in net interprovincial migration and the significant moderation in net outflow of non-permanent residents (NPR). As of April 11, 2011, the province's total population increased by more than 55,800 persons, or 1.51%, to 3,758,234 from the same period last year (Table 1). This was higher than the 1.38% and 1.42% annual growth rates recorded in the first and fourth quarter of 2010, respectively. On a quarterly basis, Alberta's total population grew by 0.41%, or almost 15,500 persons, from the fourth quarter of 2010. This was the highest quarterly population growth rate among provinces.

For Canada as a whole, total population increased by 1.06% to 34,349,236 from a year ago (Table 1). Among provinces, Alberta had the second highest year-over-year population growth (1.508%) in the first quarter of 2011 (Table 2), an improvement from the third place reported in the past four quarters, and only marginally behind the leader of Prince Edward Island (1.512%). Newfoundland and Labrador was the only province in the country that has experienced a shrinking population (-0.33%) over the same period.

Migration

As Alberta's economic and labour market conditions continue to improve, positive news continues to emerge from interprovincial migration. In the first three months of 2011, Alberta attracted 5,275 net interprovincial migrants (Table 3), the highest quarterly gains since the second quarter of 2008 and almost 17 times higher than the level (312) recorded during the same period last year (Table 4). Nationwide, Alberta was the only province that has experienced a net inflow of interprovincial migration in the first quarter. Nova Scotia saw the largest net outflow of 1,034, followed by Manitoba (-1,026) and Quebec (-894).

Among the provinces and territories, Ontario contributed the most (991) to Alberta's net interprovincial migration gains (Table 3), followed by Newfoundland and Labrador (901) and British Columbia (893). Quebec (-48) and Yukon (-13) were the only two regions that gained net interprovincial migrants from Alberta.

International migration to Alberta picked up as well. In the first quarter of 2011, 5,741 permanent residents settled in Alberta, a 15.1% drop from a year ago (Table 4). However, this was still the third highest level recorded for the same quarter over the past four decades. Meanwhile, after experiencing the largest quarterly net loss ever (-6,725) in the fourth quarter of 2010, the net outflow of NPRs moderated significantly in the first quarter of this year to 504. As a result, a total of 3,645 international migrants, including NPRs, moved to Alberta during the first three months of 2011. This was a noticeable increase compared to the net loss of almost 2,100 reported in the previous quarter.

Natural Increase

Between January 1 and March 31 of 2011, Alberta experienced a natural population growth (births minus deaths) of 6,561 persons. Particularly, the province recorded 12,736 births and 6,175 deaths.

Therefore, natural increase has accounted for 42% of the province's total population growth during the period, the second highest proportion among provinces in the country and only behind Saskatchewan (51%).

* Estimates of non-permanent residents (NPRs) represent the number of non-permanent residents living in Canada. The five following groups are referred to as NPRs: (1) persons residing in Canada claiming refugee status; (2) persons residing in Canada who hold a study permit; (3) persons residing in Canada who hold a work permit; (4) persons residing in Canada who hold a Minister's permit; (5) all non-Canadian born dependants of persons claiming refugee status, or of persons holding study permits, work permits or Minister's permits and living in Canada.
